Now is the time to give something back in recognition of that. Your donations enables Westerford to continue to enrich and educate the lives of so many children well into the future. Consider donating as a class or as an individual; you may specify which area you'd like your gift to be used in, or just give a donation in general which the school will use at its discretion. We will report back to you all as to how the Jubilee donations have been used, as well as how much money has been raised. We would also like to begin an OW bursary to help pay for the education of underprivileged children. Please contact us if you would like to contribute towards the establishment of this bursary.

Arts alumnus shines

UCT arts graduate Mikhael Subotzky exhibited at the National Arts Festival in Grahamstown earlier this year, part-reward for scooping the prestigious 2012 Standard Bank Young Artist Award for Visual Arts. Subotzky, a photographer and graduate of the Michaelis School of Fine Art, joins a long list of UCT staff and alumni who have picked up Young Artist Awards. Past winners include staffers Professors Gavin Younge (in 1986) and Pippa Skotnes (1993), both now at Michaelis, and Associate Professor Geoff Hyland of the Department of Drama (1997), as well as Lara Foot Newton (1996), director of the Baxter Theatre Centre. Past alumni recipients include actor Richard E Grant (1981) and theatre director Janice Honeyman (1982) and Nandipha Mntambo (2011).

Clark heads schools improvement initiative

With the appointment in 2011 of Dr Jonathan Clark (BSc 1979; HDE 1983; BEd 1988; MEd 1993) as director of UCT's new Schools Improvement Initiative (SII), the university has taken an increasingly hands-on approach to solving the problems of South Africa's ailing schooling system.

The SII builds on the already extensive work of the Schools Development Unit (SDU), of which Clark is also director, and is a spin-off of another UCT initiative – Edulab. While the SII will focus on Khayelitsha, this focus will not exclude involvement with other schools in other communities. Part of the SII, the 100-UP programme was also launched in Khayelitsha in 2011 to improve the results of matriculants and gear them up for study at UCT. To this end, five Grade-10 learners from each of the township's 20 secondary schools were selected to participate. Over three years, the university's staff and students will work with the SDU on a comprehensive programme to prepare these learners to compete for places at UCT at the end of 2013.

Fencer is Sportsperson of the Year

South Africa's top-ranked men's foil fencer, Jacques Viljoen, was UCT's 2011 Sportsperson of the Year, winning the coveted Jamison Cup for the second time. The final-year fine arts student won the same award in 2009, beginning a trajectory that has seen him bag the national tournament title for the past three years, an unprecedented feat. Viljoen was one of many UCT students fêted at the annual Sports Awards dinner in October 2011. The Fencing Men's First Team also won the Butterworth Cup for Team of the Year.

HIMALAYAN MOUNTAIN HIGH FOR UCT CLIMBERS

It was the denouement of a mission that began in 2011; which, in turn, was the resurrection of an expedition that took place in 2006.

That year, members of the UCT Mountain and Ski Club tackled the 2542m Patagonian Cerro Tres Picos technical rock peak. In 2011, the expedition portfolio was resurrected with a trip to the Indian Himalayan region, Himachal Pradesh, when seven students stood triumphantly atop a 6,300m peak in the Chandra Bhaga range of the Himalayas.

That achievement was worthy of being crowned UCT's Sports Performance of the Year for 2011, but the mountaineering students were not resting on their laurels just yet.

In June 2012, six students returned to the Indian Himalayas for their most daring expedition yet: the exploration of Tharag Nala (a tributary valley to the Miyar valley), and the first ascent of the 6,066m Tharang I. And those were to be mere warm-ups for the main event, as they also planned to attempt the first ascent of Tharang II, a technical ice peak of 6,011m, and another of many in the area with no recorded successful summit attempts.

The students – Brendan Argent, Greg Bowden, Duncan Fraser, Jonathan Glover, Chris Laidler and Leo le Roux – enlisted the aid of local adventure company Kaushal Desai to organise the tricky logistics.

On the ascent, the students were less concerned with the altitude of the attempted ascent than with its technical nature.

"Project Himalaya is not so much concerned with altitude as it is with the style with which the expedition will be undertaken and the nature of the route developed," they wrote on the expedition's official blog site.

The team reached the first camp for Tharang I on 15 June, two days away from base camp.

"This morning [Sunday 17 June] we made a proper foray up towards our peak," logged Ar-

#Subsides of light in the Himalayas

gent, "It's so cool to know we're the only ones ever to have been here."

After battling stomach bugs, hair-raising drives along mountain passes, dwindling food supplies and a mission-ending injury to a guide (oh, and freezing temperatures on treacherous mountain terrain), the adventurers finally began their Tharang I summit bid on 29 June.

And wasn't that something to write home about.

"At sparrow's fart we loaded up all the gear and pushed for summit camp, lugging 20kg packs," noted the travellers. "The hard morning snow helped, but by lunch time it was a treacherous mush that was exhausting to plough through."

Crossing a creaky glacier in the dark was not the most effective of strategies, and by first light on 2 July the team saw that they had veered "far off course". But, while the sun provided welcome light, it was also a source of danger.

Having reached the shoulder of the summit and with turnaround-time approaching, the team realised "with dismay" that the arête to the summit, though not particularly steep, was narrow and loose – and alarmingly long.

"The hot sun was melting the snow and ice and making our retreat increasingly dangerous, especially with the glacier still to cross," observed the climbers.

It was decided that Fraser and Le Roux, the most experienced climbers in the group, would make a last-gasp assault on the summit by themselves, but the risk was still too great.

"In the end we made the tough decision," they wrote, "Safety was our priority and summiting was not worth the risk of a collapsing snow bridge or a fall into one of the many covered crevasses."

"We sat for a moment staring out at one of the world's most beautiful landscapes, lit by an eerie full moon that turned red as it set, touching the surrounding snow peaks with pink."

"With a tumult of emotions we retraced our steps. Bitter disappointment, relief, pride at our efforts and wise decision, fear, and awe for this silent, beautiful, deadly place."

"And not a moment too soon. Barely 10 steps back and one of the guys broke the surface, falling up to his arms before arresting with his axe and clawing to the relative safety of the slope."

In the end, the summit bid of Tharang I was unsuccessful, and Tharang II remains untouched by UCT spikes and crampons for now. But to say that the trip was fruitless could not be further from the truth.

Writes...my cousin Alan Greenblo '62 suggested I send this to you.

It's the 1961 unbeaten Under 15 rugby team. You may already have it or the Under 19 version from the graduation year 1963. It was one of the best rugby teams ever. David Mitchell went on to play for Western Province after Oxford (on the floor right).

I live in the USA so if you would kindly pass on my best regards to all for the Class of '63 and their 50th reunion this year.

Lydia Szapiro (1974) lydia.szapiro@gmail.com

Greetings from me in Wellington, New Zealand . Thanks for this invitation - I would dearly love to be able to come but distance is a teensy factor which mitigates against!

Just in case it's nice for you to know, a mini "OW reunion" took place here over the past four fabulous weeks, travelling through New Zealand on an extraordinary holiday none of us will ever forget. A non-stop hullabaloo, the entourage consisted of the four of us "girls", Cheryl Stevens, Gill Reay, Jo Verrier-Jones (now Postles) and me, close friends all the way through high school (1970 - 1974), who were last together for Gill's wedding in CT in 1983, plus tolerant husbands and an assortment of bemused young-adult children. We all savoured every minute of this moveable feast of unforgettable experiences.

We talked, reminisced, laughed, cried, played silly games, marvelled at old photos and school magazines, cooked and ate splendidly, swam, snorkelled, sang, read books, swapped recipes and philosophies of life, were gobsmacked by the natural beauty of this country and much, much more.

It will take us all a while to process the whole event, with the help of a zillion photos taken along the way but one thing was made very clear: it has been a wonderful opportunity to reinforce those ties of friendship which held us close in our youth, recognising that the connection is still strong and meaningful, despite the decades which have flown by and the geographical distance between us.

Fitness is catching!

Ever wanted to try ballet – or beach volleyball? You don't have to be a professional athlete to give your fitness goals a revamp, as these readers prove

'DOING BALLET IS SO MUCH FUN AND IT HAS DEFINITELY MADE ME FEEL MORE CONFIDENT'

Andy Frieslaar, 45, is married with three daughters and two sons. She lives in Newlands.

"I've always loved dancing, but when I gave it up in my childhood, I thought that was the end of my dancing days. It was only when I enrolled my daughter in ballet lessons a few years ago, that I realised it wasn't too late. When I dropped my daughter at her first class, I stayed to watch for a few minutes. I was immediately hooked and spent afternoons at the side of the studio, desperate to get involved.

One day I plucked up the courage to ask my daughter's teacher, Lorraine, if she might consider giving adult classes. After enough nagging she gave in, so I asked a couple of my friends if they were keen, and four of them jumped at the chance. When it's done well, ballet looks effortless and I was convinced I'd remember all the steps I'd learnt as a child. So, armed with the few moves we had, we arrived at our first lesson, excited to give it a shot.

We spent most of the time laughing at each other, and had a great time, but realised we had a long way to go. There were looks of confusion when Lorraine first taught the long, French steps, but we quickly caught on and our mistakes were refreshed. I now have lessons twice a week for an hour, and most of the original group is still in the class. All of us have kids, so we bring them along. We pack them a picnic and they do their homework, but once they're done, they join in with our dancing. The classes only cost around R150 per month, which is a small price to pay for something so rewarding.

Most of us feel a little uncomfortable in light lycra, so we dance in black jazz pants and tops. We've all improved a lot, and recently took our Grade Seven exam. I couldn't believe my eyes when I got my marks back – 85%! It was a great sense of achievement. The dance, the music, the exercise and the social side of ballet makes it perfect for me.

I feel much fitter than I used to and that makes me proud of my body, not just of what it looks like, but of what it can do. After a particularly long class, my muscles feel wonderfully weary, which makes me happy because I know I'm using every inch of my body. Ballet keeps me supple physically and mentally – remembering all those steps is quite an exercise for the brain too! Doing something that requires strength and stamina makes you feel great."

RENUNIONS

1967 - 2012 45th Matric Reunion

About 40 people including Rob le Roux, the headmaster and his wife, Jenny, attended the reunion held between 11am and 4 pm under the trees outside the Sports Centre on December 8th. We had a finger lunch and drinks from a cash bar. Obviously much fun was had trying to recognise one another after 45 years although some of us had been to a 25th reunion. Once connected, we conversed as if there was no gap at all. It was amazing what people remembered after so long of the highs and lows of 5 years at school. Some had even been through primary school together.

A Westerford 1967 Matrics Facebook page was started where lots of pre and post reunion communication has been going on. Teachers Sally de Smidt (now Michell), Aletta vd Vyver (now Broekhuizen) Tony Eaton and Mary Anderson (now Webster) attended. Adrian Lichtman, Audrey Wallin and Bruce Owen Wahl came all the way from Canada. Marlow Scott Wilson (nee Mandy Wilson) from Mpumalanga, Graham Bussel and Fritz von Krosigk from Gauteng, Margaret Lillienfield (nee Smith) from KZN, and Guy Dormehl from Sedgefield. Many who could not attend have now made contact with old friends so even for that reason it was worth arranging. We were very sad to see that 8 of our classmates had died and at least 6 teachers had passed away.

The newly compiled "Westerford Story 1953 to 2012", a 30 minute DVD was shown for the first time and all the team pictures from the 1967 school magazine were projected for a good laugh and many "my we have changed" comments. We closed with a tour of the school with each classroom or quad bringing back fond memories as well as amazement at the progress.

The biggest problem is finding lost friends especially the girls who are more difficult to trace with their married names. So why not keep the OWA co-ordinator, Margie Hiscock, informed of your whereabouts each time you move so your friends can find you when your turn comes to reunite. It is so worthwhile.

NEWS FROM THE SCHOOL

Dear Parents

Welcome to 2013, we trust that it will be a most enjoyable and rewarding year. We have had a relatively quiet start to the year but are very enthusiastic about the prospects of the new year particularly as it is our Diamond Jubilee Year.

MATRIC RESULTS 2012:

Once again our Matrics have done us proud. Being listed as a "Top 10" school in the Western Cape is an amazing achievement, but to do it so consistently over the years is exceptional. A 100% pass rate and a 99,4% Bachelor's pass is almost what we have come to expect from our matriculants.

Congratulations to all our Matrics and thanks and praise to our teaching staff.
(A full summary of these outstanding results can be found elsewhere in this newsletter).

STAFF:

Firstly, we say congratulations to four staff members who have been appointed into internal leadership positions: Mrs Joyce Lamont to Deputy Principal, Ms Suneen Laing to HOD (Head of Grade 10) and to Mr Gordon Brookbanks and Mrs Lucy Nixon as Assistant Grade Heads.

We have four new teachers and Dr Herman Kitshoff, who returns to Westerford to head our History Department. Starting this year the four new teachers are: Miss Philippa Bodenstein in the Science Department, Mr Samora Menze in Maths and Junior Science, Miss Nina Hanekom, Maths and Mr Dayne Williams, Geography. We wish these teachers all the best for a long and happy stay at Westerford.

CLAREMONT HIGH SCHOOL:

This year sees the start of the third year in the short life of Claremont High School with the two very significant new features being the appointment of Mr Murray Gibbon as the first official Headmaster from 1 January 2013, and the very first Matric Class of 2013. Westerford remains very involved, as the Governance of the school is still in the hands of the Westerford SGB with a sub-committee of Westerford parents still serving in this capacity.

The entire Westerford community remains committed to this project and anticipates a very long and happy association and partnership with CHS.

DIAMOND JUBILEE:

We are very excited about the planned celebrations for our 60th anniversary. The month of March has been identified as our "Jubilee Month" and a number of very stimulating events have been planned. Highlights of the month will be our annual Founders Day ceremony and activities on Thursday 7 March, a musical performance by our Big Band and Choir at Cavendish Square on the evening of Friday 15 March and our production of Grease starting on Wednesday 20 March.

Please watch the press and our website for details and make every effort to join us when you can.

This is going to be a very eventful year and we hope and trust that you will enter into the spirit of enthusiasm and excitement that is already evident amongst most of our staff and pupils.

Yours sincerely
Rob le Roux
